

ADDENDA

headquarters. (Adams to BTW, July 28, 1904, BTW Papers, ATT; BTW to Adams, July 28, 1904, Con. 18, BTW Papers, DLC.)

<sup>2</sup> Barber's letter to Scott has not been located. It was probably the letter in which Barber alleged that Scott had a conflict of interest between the Voice of the Negro and another journal owned by BTW, the Colored American Magazine. See Scott to Hertel, Jenkins and Company, Aug. 4, 1904, and Austin N. Jenkins to Scott, Aug. 5, 1904, above, 8:38-40.

From Clifford H. Plummer

Boston Highlands Mass. Oct 1 1904

They<sup>1</sup> hired oddfellows hall have circulars printed I have two thirds of them in my possession will go over tomorrow morning and collect three that will [be] placed at Churches.

C. H. P.

TWIr Con. 19 BTW Papers DLC.

<sup>1</sup> William Monroe Trotter and other anti-Bookerites planned an indignation meeting on the same night BTW was to speak in Cambridge, Mass. This telegram is in reply to BTW to Plummer, Sept. 29, 1904, above, 8:75.

From Bradley Gilman

Boston Mass Dec 31/1904

My dear Mr Washington, I hope that if Dr. Courtney saw you, at the train, in Boston, en route for New York, that he gave a good account of my effort at the meeting of the "Boston Literary Society." I tried to be discreet, and I fancy that I was, because our friend Trotter was not drawn from his lair in a ferocious mood; he spoke, after me, but not excitedly, and did not mention you by name.

Both Villard and I said our say about you, firmly and warmly, but not defiantly.

It seems a pity that so ably edited a paper as the Guardian should be on the wrong side of your work. I wish it could be bought up and steered in the right direction. When Trotter referred indirectly to you,