

CONTRIBUTORS

---

WARWICK ANDERSON is Associate Professor of the History and Philosophy of Science and Director of the Centre for the Study of Health and Society at the University of Melbourne. He has published widely on the history of American public health and on race and colonialism in Southeast Asia. His current project is a history of racial and environmental thought in Australia.

GEOFFREY BOLTON is Senior Scholar in Residence at Murdoch University and an Emeritus Professor of Edith Cowan University, having previously held chairs at the Universities of Western Australia, London (Australian Studies Centre) and Queensland, and at Murdoch University. He was ABC Boyer Lecturer in 1992 and Visiting Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford, in 1995. He was general editor of the Oxford History of Australia and the author of Volume 5 (1942-95) in that series. His other publications include A Fine Country to Starve In (1994) and Daphne Street (1997).

BEN HANEMAN was born in Florence but is essentially a Sydneysider. A graduate in medicine from the University of Sydney, he first worked in general practice then became a consultant physician with a commitment to medical education. His is also an amateur medical historian, book collector and enthusiastic feuilletonist.

CAROLINE HANNAWAY is Historical Consultant to the National Institutes of Health Office, Bethesda Maryland, USA, where she is engaged on a history of the NIH's response to AIDS. A graduate of the University of Melbourne, she did her PhD in the history of medicine at Johns Hopkins University. She was a faculty member of the Johns Hopkins Institute of the History of Medicine from 1979 to 1992, and she edited The Bulletin of the History of Medicine for eleven years. She edited with Victoria Harden and John Parascandola, AIDS and the Public Debate: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives (1995) and with Ann La Berge, Constructing Paris Medicine (1999). Her research in recent years has focussed on twentieth-century American medical science.

BRONWEN HEWITT and ROBYN WAYMOUTH are the archivists of Melbourne's Royal Children's and Royal Women's hospitals respectively. Both are qualified archivists and both have been supporting major historical projects in their hospitals. The two hospitals now form the Women's and Children's Healthcare Network.

RICHARD LARKINS is Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, Dentistry and Health Sciences, and Chair of the National Health & Medical Research Council.

RUTH LITTLE is a B Med Sc student who is researching the attitudes and expectations of 5th year medical students towards the difficulties (or otherwise) of balancing a medical career with family life.

JANET McCALMAN is a senior lecturer in the Centre for the Study of Health and Society at the University of Melbourne. Her most recent book, Sex and Suffering, women's health and a women's hospital, 1856-1996 has just been re-issued in paperback in the United States by Johns Hopkins University Press.

DAN O'DONNELL is a medical practitioner and historian.

ANDREW PARKER is a Master's student in journalism at the University of Technology, Sydney. This article was based on his BA Hons thesis at the University of Sydney in 1998. He extends his warm thanks to Dr Jan Kociumbus.

JOHN PEARN is the Surgeon-General, Australian Defence Force, and Professor of Child Health at the University of Queensland. The Past President of the Australian Society of the History of Medicine, he has published prolifically on the history of medicine in Australia.

F. B. SMITH is Emeritus Professor of History and Visiting Fellow at the Australian National University. His publications include The People's Health (1979), The Retreat of Tuberculosis (1988), biographies of William James Linton (1973) and Florence Nightingale (1982) and a study of 'Agent Orange: the Australian Aftermath' in Brendan O'Keefe's Medicine at War (1994).

RUSSELL VINER holds a DPhil in the history of medicine from Oxford University and is Director of Adolescent Medicine, University College London Hospitals and Great Ormond Street Hospital. He has written a study of the great American pediatrician Abraham Jacobi.

JOHN HARLEY WARNER is Professor of the History of Medicine, Yale University. The author of a number of seminal scholarly articles, his books include The Therapeutic Perspective: medical practice, knowledge and identity in America, 1820-1885 (1986) (which was re-published in paperback with a new preface by Princeton University Press in 1997), and most recently Against the Spirit of the System: the French impulse in nineteenth century American medicine (1998).

ANN WESTMORE is former science journalist and writer who is currently working on a PhD on the history of lithium and the treatment of mood disorders under Dr John Cade in Melbourne.

PETER WINTERTON is the Medical Director of the Child Protection Unit at Princess Margaret Hospital Perth. He has a special interest in ancient medical history and Nazi medicine, and is a founding member of ASHM. He has just been elected to his second term as President of ASHM.